My husband and I first came to Pioneertown in 1965. The next year we bought a four-acre parcel from the Golden Empire which ran a land office out of White's General Store. We bought an adjoining parcel a year later from the same land office. The parcels sat on a hill overlooking present day Pioneertown. And in 1969 Russ Hayden sold us five more acres next to what is now Pappy and Harriet's. Our intention was to develop a little old west town for the public's amusement. And even though we abandoned the idea after just so much County red tape, we stayed here and have wonderful memories of it.

The Bowling Alley was always a centerpiece of the town. It was originally built by Lillian Thompson and her husband. Lillian played Cactus Kate in many of the old movies. The Sons of the Pioneers even wrote a song about her. When she was dressed as Cactus she looked very different than she ordinarily did; she even smoked a big cigar. The Bowling Alley served as the first post office here; and it housed the water company when we locals owned the utility. We would go there to pay our water bill. There was a huge wood sign painted with blackboard paint which hung over the bar. All of our names were printed on it along with the months of the year. When you paid your bill, it was marked "PAID" on the

the whole town including the property known as the Golden Empire which began on the north east side of Pioneertown Road and stretched out to Pipes Canyon. He had big plans to develope the area with schools, golf course, equestrian center, air strip, and, of course, private ranchos. Lefton ran out of money before water was ever put in. There are water pipes buried throughout the project stopping just short of the abandoned water tank you can still see from Pioneertown Road.

Water was in short supply, but there was never a shortage of local characters. A man named Charlie Hanie dressed himself as the sheriff and liked to walk around town and making sure order was kept and that shop keepers kept to the Old West theme. A fountain used to be in the middle of Mane Street: it was moved by a man named Stoney who lived on the corner of Pioneertown Road and Minna Gommbell. Stoney spent his weekend nights going between the Bowling Alley and the Red Dog Saloon drinking. One night in the early 70's Stoney drove

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

It is one of the beautiful compensations of life, that no man can sincerely help another without helping himself. ~ Ralph Waldo Emerson

A lesson I learned

Last year at this time I was contemplating whether or not to answer the call to serve as MBHS President. As a long-time volunteer I believed in the importance of preserving local history and wanted to see the organization succeed. Still, there were a lot of reasons not to serve. Taking on the duties of president might interfere with my search for a real job; nagging health concerns had me preoccupied and serving as president would mean stepping out of my comfort zone and into an entirely new area for me.

Under reasons to serve, I could think of only one; it seemed no one was willing to serve and I wanted to see the Historical Society continue. A few short weeks later I found myself taking the oath of office. Suddenly my days were busy planning special events, learning parliamentary procedures, and arranging programs. At night I worked on setting goals and contemplated new ways to involve, interest and increase membership. Some of my ideas were hugely successful, others were not. Running board meetings was a big challenge. They became a source of strife over differences in style and vision. The differences were eventually resolved but at a high price. Almost all of the original board resigned. Now more than ever it appeared the future of the Society was in jeopardy. So I turned to those around me and asked for help. Several were also unemployed and agreed to pitch in. The situation made for some busy months, but not only did MBHS survive, it thrived and managed to meet all of our goals along the way!

Not long after, I found myself reflecting on all that had transpired when it occurred to me that something was altogether different. I still needed a real job, my physical ailments weren't any better, and now my comfort zone was bigger. I felt comfortable in the office. The difference was that by shifting my focus to MBHS, and making myself useful and constructive, previous concerns were made trivial. My attention was redirected from things that weren't in my control and things that were. I was doing something positive and my world felt like a better place because of it.

A message to you

The best way to minimize your own worries and concerns is to do something for someone else. We don't need studies to tell us that volunteering can improve physical and mental health. Volunteering can give you a sense of achievement and purpose, and can help you stay social, and make new friends, and contacts.

Many who have given up searching for work find themselves at home with little to stimulate their minds. If this is you, why not pitch in at MBHS and start feeling useful again?

Please contact us at MBHS.history@gmail.com or 760-364-2000. Whether you're interested in history or pulling weeds, we can use your help. And at the end of the day, your struggles will seem distant, smothered by the gratitude you'll feel from MBHS.

I slept, and I dreamt that life was all joy.
I woke, and saw that life was but service.
I served, and discovered that service was joy.

~ Rabindranath Tagore,
Indian Nobel laureate poet, writer, philosopher

Wish List

This year we would like to arrange for the MBHS to be officially connected to an Internet service to help in research capablities.

With your help and donations The MBHS will have an opportunity to expand its technology into the 21st Century.

For those already on the internet we encourage you to visit our website www.mbhs.net. If you have a Facebook account - become our friend at:

Morongo Basin Historical Society Group Page We're also working on a new app for your computer and smart phone, that will give instant history about areas of the Morongo Basin. More than a half century after its construction, and 13 years after it was disassembled, moved, reassembled and mothballed, Landers' original little Post Office awakened like Sleeping Beauty earlier this summer.

itch ... well, two switches ... po

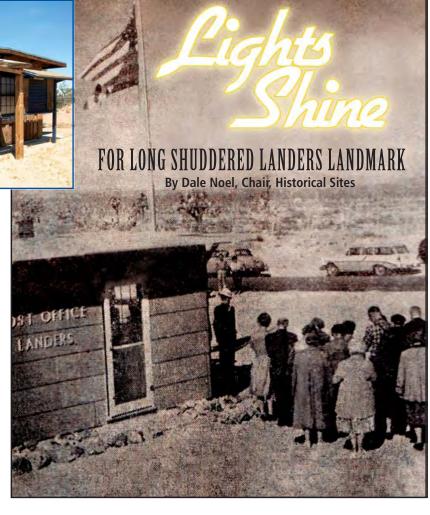

With the flip of a switch ... well, two switches ... power and water seemed to bring the long dormant local icon miraculously back to life.

But it wasn't a miracle that resurrected the one-time civic, social and cultural seat of this remote community. It was the energy, ingenuity and generosity of many individuals working together to see the Post Office Utilities Project through completion. The efforts of all who volunteered will live on in their accomplishment. Gratitude goes out to the 2010 Bakeless Bake Sale contributors, to Assemblyman Paul Cook who helped cut through red tape, to Tom Granger who worked with county inspectors for permits, to Carole Schreiber who literally worked in the trenches, and myriad others such as Jim Brock, Rachel Crawford, Paul Geeson, Ron Montgomery, Lloyd Noel and the US Navy Junior Enlisted Association from Twentynine Palms.

Built as a recreational cabin in 1958 under the Homestead Act, Vernette Landers purchased the cabin for the purpose of providing mail service. It was the first post office to be approved in an area of government recreational tracts and was dedicated as a rural contract postal station on May 2, 1962.

The approximate 400 sq. ft. wood cabin was divided into two tiny interior parts with slightly over half allotted for postal work, with the balance dedicated for public access to mailboxes and other services. Many locals can remember waiting outside the little Post Office visiting under the trees there. Others gathered under the cottonwoods across the road where they would socialize and fill their jugs from the faucets there. Often this is where plans were made to meet again for Friday Night "Cook Your Own Steak" and dancing at the Longhorn or for Belfield Hall's Sunday morning breakfast.

On May 2, 1998, several yards west of the original, a new Post Office opened with great fanfare. The original building was returned to Mrs. Landers. She was to move it from 890 Landers Lane to 632 N. Landers Lane where it now stands. Prohibited from moving the building intact, stepson Mark Landers dismantled & moved the small structure piece by piece, then reassembled it on the southwest corner of the property where Mrs. Landers lived much of her life. Glass display units now line the inside of the little building. Each is filled with nostalgic relics and other findings like retired 1962 cancellation stamps, historic documents and old photos from Landers and surrounding communities.

Most rural communities have seen the original post offices razed or left to ruin. Vernette Landers understood the little building's importance as a repository of local history. A Charter Member of the Society, she presented its first program, The History of Landers and the Post Office. She believed in the organization enough to bequeath to MBHS her property, including the original Post Office, now designated a California Historical Resource.

Her vision was to provide a permanent Basin-wide repository for local history and ensure for the preservation of her vast archive of local history and her small private Post Office museum. Anyone who's been to the property in recent weeks knows that Mrs. Landers vision has finally come to pass thanks to the work begun by her and now finished by those who share her respect for the past.

Landers original little Post Office is available to tour Tuesdays from 11 am to 3 pm and by request.

CANIDATE'S QUALIFICATIONS

NOMINATION SLATE FOR MBHS BOARD OF DIRECTORS ELECTION

Barbara Harris, incumbent

For the past year Barbara has served as MBHS President. From the moment of her installation she has infused her creative style into the daily operations and promotion of the Society. Her fresh perspective and 'can-do' attitude have brought many changes to > MBHS even as she learned the ropes as the top officer. Early on she set goals for her term and then methodically followed them toward completion.

Her forecast for the future of MBHS is bright and ambitious; she hopes to be re-elected so that she might see her forecast through.

Bob Benson, incumbent Bob's almost 20 years experience in general construction makes him well-qualified to continue in the office of 1st Vice President in charge of properties, a position he has held since his appointment in June. Since then, he has ably demonstrated the skill and motivation required for this office as evidenced in his many recent modifications at the MBHS Landers property. The very close proximity of Bob's own home to MBHS allows for his rapid response in the event of an emergency or other urgent matter requiring an officer's presence on site.

Ruth Long, incumbent

Since her appointment as interim vice president in charge of finance in May, Ruth has consistently proven her aptitude and readiness to meet and exceed the requirements of this position. Her continued service as 2nd Vice President assures continuity while her managerial, personal and professional skills guarantee the competent fulfillment of the tasks at hand. As a Founder, Charter and Lifetime Member of this organization, Ruth has demonstrated her allegiance to its continued success.

Jeannie Lindberg, incumbent

Since Jeannie's interim appointment to this office in May, she has repeatedly demonstrated her skill and aptitude as MBHS Treasurer. If elected to continue in this capacity, the Society will benefit from the continuity she brings, her attention to detail and her insistence for adhering to established procedure.

Laurie Geeson, incumbent

Laurie has ably held the office of recording secretary in an interim capacity since her appointment in May. Since then she has consistently proven her skills and diligence in this area. The Society has already seen the benefits of her attention to detail and past experience in this capacity. If elected in her own right, the continuity further enhances what Laurie brings to the table.

into the fountain and really messed up his car. He was so mad that he got someone with a tractor to come by the next morning and move the fountain to the side of Mane Street. It remains there to this day.

In the late 60's or early 70's a retired L.A. cop and his wife bought the Red Dog. She was determined to make it look like an authentic old saloon. They spent a fortune refurbishing the place; she picked out and had red flocked wallpaper installed. My husband belonged to the Bravados, a group that put on western shows in front of the Red Dog on Sunday afternoons. They also used Altolph's building, now the church, and the Grubstake Building, which is no longer there. Across from the Bowling Alley was Joe's Gun Shop. Joe Hammett use to sell guns, ammo, and repaired guns from there. He was a fast draw and took many a 1st Place for his talent. One year there was a national contest in Landers; it was very interesting.

The OK Corral was leased by some folks who rented horses to the public. My stepsons learned to ride horses there. They would also take us on trail rides out Wydonot Road and along the roads that today are lined with homes. There were only a couple of cabins there at the time.

Russ and Mousie Hayden were instrumental in getting Pioneertown Road widened and paved from Yucca Valley. They used to tell stories about how they would bring dynamite from the L A area in their car and how they worried when they came up bumpy, narrow, dirt Pioneertown Road with the dynamite at Mousie's feet! Today weekend tourists speed along the same road at 50 mph or more!

It has been interesting watching Pioneertown change through the years. One thing that never changed was the two 4-acre parcels we originally purchased from Golden Empire. They remain empty except for our own road leading to a large pad. Maybe our great grandchildren will inherit our dream and enjoy living there someday.

Written by Bill BoBo Life in the Morongo Basin

Excerpted from the Joanne Wilson's Collection of Memories Volume 5

The biggest storm that I have every seen in my entire life struck Morongo Valley! It was absolutely awesome!—and frightening! Anyone who lived there during the storm or witnessed the des-truction as an aftermath (like the McKinneys) can testify to the truth of what I write here. It started at about the time it normally would have been sunset except there was no sun. It built up; and the rain came down harder and harder. None of us could sleep; we moved up to Sis' rock house, it had a much better fireplace and was much warmer. The 4 of us, Pop, Mom, Allen and I played cards. Close to midnight the rain was coming down so hard that there was a "roar" of noise throughout the valley. We opened the front doors and stood under the overhang to watch.

The valley was lit up as though there was moonlight. Water cascading down the mountains had created a type of "friction light". There was a shallow, wide wash on the lower part of our 40 acres. We could see it, even at midnight, and there was a literal river running there. We watched in awe as the rainfall intensified, it was almost like standing under a waterfall. Fortunately our houses were at least 50 feet above the wash. Soon the valley was so lit up and bright that one could have read a newspaper just from the awesome, friction generated light from over the mountains as the water poured off in such vast quantities.

Most of the rain seemed to have fallen over the mountains between San Gorgonio and Yucca Valley. There were floods at least as far north as Pipes Canyon.

Morongo Valley took the brunt of the storm. Starting near Bolsters and Shermans in upper Big Morongo Canyon, a ditch or trench was cut in the floor of the canyon. In places it was over 50 feet wide and as much as 10 feet deep. It extended all the way to the Covington's on the lower Big Morongo. Where the flood waters had crossed the highway just barely to the east of Morongo Lodge, it tore out all the new asphalt pavement, and left an opening in it that was 8-10 feet deep and at least 30 feet across. The canyon below Gile's Morongo Inn was devastated. There was little sign of highway left.

This happened in 1938. Bill Bobo wrote a lengthy article about growing up in Morongo Valley. The MBHS has copies of the books that Joan Wilson published; they are available for sale at the gift shop in Tamma's Magic Mercantile and by calling 760-364-2000 or emailing mbhs.history.net.
